THE VALUE OF VOCATIONAL COURSES

Hartland Academy, in my opinion, is lacking in some vocational courses. These vocational courses, which should include agriculture, manual training, shop, home economics, and a commercial course, now include only a very satisfactory home economics and commercial course.

The vocational courses are favored by their advocates as a means of fitting youth for the practical duties of life, in addition to training them in the fundamental principles of a general education. Through the home economics course, a high school girl is taught clothing and textiles, which help her to choose the right cloth and sew. She is also taught foods and nutritions, which help her to plan well-balanced meals and cooking skills. Another unit included is housing and home furnishings, which help her to choose a good home and furnish it correctly, with the amount of money available. Through the child care and guidance unit, she learns how to help children to become happy, well-adjusted adults. She is taught home management and consumer buying which teaches her how to get the most for her money and how to run a home efficiently. The family health and safety unit helps her to know what to do in an emergency. Through this course a girl surely will learn how to become a better homemaker and mother.

The commercial course provides the necessary background so that students can become typists, stenographers, or bookkeepers. In office practice, students learn how to file, general office procedure, and the use of different types of office machines. In shorthand, students learn to take dictation and to transcribe the letters which are dictated to them. In bookkeeping, students learn how to keep the financial records of businesses. With this background the students can also go on to one of the many job opportunities in the clerical field.

But what of the student who enjoys working with tools or machinery or who is interested in becoming a carpenter or metal worker? He should also have a chance to obtain the knowledge with which he can best work. Many students do not have the mental ability or desire to keep up with the subjects now provided; therefore, they drop out of school. If carving, cabinet making, and general wood working were provided, many of the students would find that they could do something constructive working with their hands. Therefore, they would be happier and better able to adjust themselves to high school.

Parents, teachers, and interested citizens must work together if the education of the young people in this community is to be improved.

If these courses were provided at Hartland Academy, I am sure that the citizens of this community would find it was well worth the time, effort, and money to provide a better education for the future citizens of our community.

LITERATURE

SCHOOL DAYS HAVE CHANGED OVER THE CENTURIES

The caveman's schooling was interesting, but quite different than any educational system that followed.

Transportation to and from school was provided by a dragon, or some other prehistoric creature. On some cold mornings, the heater must have really warmed the students up.

The classrooms were large caves with wall to wall rock. The rooms were very dark, except for the biology room which usually had an electric eel. The intercom system was simple, all the principal had to do was speak loud enough, and the sound would echo through all the caves.

Homework was the easiest part of going to school. Since they hadn't figured out how to write, the students brought in animals which stood for words. The only problem occurred during English class when someone had to use the dictionary.

The teachers' pay was the homework that the students brought to school. When the teacher wanted a good meal, he would give his students a real tasty assignment. The only problem was that the students brought in the wrong word. They lost more teachers that way than by all other hazards combined.

The only advantage that the caveman had after completing his schooling, was that possibly he had more brains than the beasts he hunted.

The Egyptian schooling was the first really difficult schooling, and it was extremely tiring. One of the hardest parts of school for an Egyptian scholar was getting to school and back again. Transportation was limited, and walking on the hot sand was difficult. Another hazard was that when a sand storm came blowing, the roads would be completely overflowing with sand, and the traffic would truly be in a pile.

School was usually held in temples. They had just invented stairs, and what a convenience they must have been!

The student's homework was very hard to do because he had to chisel the words on a block of stone. This was difficult—just consider carrying home a paper weighing 5200 pounds, especially if he had to walk one of those desert miles.

The teacher was paid in much the same way as they are today except that bits of valuable stone were used in place of money. Being learned was worth more than it had ever been before that time.

A well educated Egyptian could get a great many things. He could have his own pyramid, a nice sandy lawn, five or ten wives, his own swimming pool, and, if he were really intelligent, some water to go in the pool.

Man of the 18th, 19th, and 20th century has enjoyed education at its finest.

The school transportation of the 18th century was mostly by horse or by foot. The 19th century transportation was by horse and wagon. The 20th century began a new era of transportation with the horse power engines which ran the first school buses.

Classrooms of the last three centuries have not greatly expanded, but the number of pupils has risen steadily. Now wall to wall floors have been replaced by wall to wall students, and this is becoming one of our largest problems in schooling.

Homework is comparatively easy if one studies, but if at any time a student shirks his responsibilities, then school work is really like the old days. The student who says school work is piled on too much is usually the one who is behind and has shirked his duties as a student.

Teachers of the past three centuries have been helpful, understanding, well trained, and just plain human.

The teachers' pay has been one of the big faults of education. It takes money for expert teachers, and in the long run, money in the right place can and will do a lot for America's youth.

In the past three centuries it has been plain to see that man has had a growing need for good education, and in the times to come it will be even more evident. Man has found the need, now he must satisfy his needs with proper education.

STUDENT COUNCIL

What is a Student Council? In the broad sense of the word, it is a laboratory of citizenship and is made up of leaders of the student body.

The Student Council is the most important organization of a junior high school, academy, or high school. An efficient Student Council tends to bring the faculty and student body closer together.

You may have asked, what does a Student Council actually do? At a recent United States Student Council Convention, sixty-nine purposes were listed. The five most important were: to promote citizenship, to practice leadership as well as followership, to advance scholarship, to build school spirit and sportsmanship, and to practice democratic procedure.

In many schools the prestige of Student Councils is not what it should be. In many schools this organization is not given enough responsibility and often not enough respect by the student body. Fortunately, most of the Student Councils try to improve these conditions.

A student who is a member of the Student Council should feel honored and proud. When he goes to a convention, such as the M.A.S.C. (Maine Association of Student Councils), the school is judged by the actions of the student. He must show leadership, responsibility, and

Yes, an efficient Student Council is of the utmost importance to a school. As the saying goes, "Without a shepherd the herd would be lost."

A BRILLIANT IDEA

Although I'm not usually found in many homes, I am frequently used in offices and schools. I come in many styles and shapes, either modern or old, electrical or manual forms. Now I come in pink, blue, green, and grey, instead of that dull, old black box I used to be. When you really think about it, I've advanced quite a bit in times.

People don't realize it, but I do get tired after being pounded all day. Of course, I enjoy being used by the people who keep me nice and clean, so I don't get choked with dust and eraser leavings, but when I get some of the jokers that don't give a hoot whether I work for anyone else as long as I get done what they need, I get rather peeved at them.

When students use me in school, I really don't mind. I especially enjoy the first-year students. They come in for their first lessons. Actually, they don't know a thing about me. They take off my cover and some just stand and stare when they see the way I'm put together.

The first lessons on me are in the placement of fingers. After all have learned the right position—and believe me, it takes more than one lesson for some—they have the basic function for future use.

I started out being pounded with F 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, F, J, F. This goes on for about four weeks. Have you ever sat and had someone pound the same thing over and over and over on you? Well, if you haven't let me tell you, it's no pleasure. By the end of the fourth week, I'm relieved when they start with complete sentences.

Most students, after they've learned my basic procedures are bored stiff with me. That's when they come in and just pound on me.

But that's enough of students' use. Let's take a look at how I'm used in the office.

Here I'm so busy. Every minute someone's got a job I have to do. Oh dear . . . , if it's not one thing, it's another.

I have letters to be done, invoices to be posted, telegrams to type. Oh, there are so many ways I'm useful.

In the homes I'm used for homework assignments, business letters, and just for practice.

So you see, even though we are not large machines and can't talk, we typewriters were really a brilliant idea.

MONDAY MORNING

Most teachers look forward to Monday mornings. After two days of rest the teachers feel that the students should be wide awake and raring to go. Now what do you suppose ever gave them such a fantastic idea? Just see what a typical Monday morning is like at the average high school.

Monday morning is the hardest morning of all for the average teen-age girl. After a wonderful, whirlwind weekend, who wants to sit all day in the dull old classrooms of a school? Nobody . . . Consequently, the girls appear rather sloppy on Monday mornings. Here comes a typical student now; one shoe is polished and the other is not because she ran out of polish; her skirt is not pressed because her mother was too busy to do it and she just couldn't find the time; her hair is a mess because she didn't take the time to do it right; and who knows if she took her weekly bath or not. Is this what the teacher expects???? I should say not!!!!

And the boys are just as bad, if not worse. They look like notorious bandits who haven't been to town for a month. Their pants haven't been pressed in nearly a fortnight, and I think they wear the same shirt for days at a time. Just to make the picture complete, they have forgotten to shave all weekend. Of course, the boys have a good excuse for their messy appearance; they worked all weekend on their jalopys and just didn't have the time to do anything else. (Did I say a good excuse??)

There is not much difference in the actions of the boys and the girls on Monday mornings. Both are sleepy, grumpy, and especially unfriendly to their teachers, who work so hard to give them a chance to get decent education.

Finally classtime arrives. Off the students trudge to their first class of the day. They walk into the room and there is the teacher all smiles and ready with a surprise quiz.

You would suppose after a weekend that the students would be completely prepared for the unexpected, surprise quiz. But . . . Are they??? Where do you think they would get the time to do their studies if they couldn't find time to fix their clothes so they looked half decent?

You can tell, just by looking at them, what the students are thinking. The girls, thinking of that wonderful first date with the college football hero, look amazingly far away, but, when asked a question, they reply correctly without losing the dreams of yesterday. And the boys, who are thinking of what a marvelous time they will have with their best girls and their best jalopies, at the Christmas Prom next month, look lost in a world all their own. What happens when they are asked a question??? They look up in an astonished sort of way and ask innocently, "What was the question again?"

You would think that after a morning like this a teacher would just plain give up and turn to another occupation, but instead they work their way through another "Monday Morning" in hopes of better days to follow.

Spring

When Springtime comes around, And the snow all leaves the ground, Then my heart is filled with joy, It is the same with every boy! When the birds come back to share, Their songs that fill the air; When the farmer tills his land, And there's not an idle hand; When the road is filled with mud, And the littlest stream may flood; When the flowers begin to bloom, Banishing the winter's gloom; This is the time I like best, Though I have no time to rest.

JUNIOR CLASS

Our first activity of the year was a record hop on September 23, which was very successful and was enjoyed by all.

On January 18 we had a "sweet sale" which netted us a profit toward our class trip.

A casserole supper on March 18 was the next major activity. This was a public affair following the Winter Carnival.

The Junior Class presented the play "High Window" as its entry in the Intramural One Act Play contest this year.

Two of our classmates, Gordon Dunlop and Deatra Jones, were winners in the regional Science Fair held in March at South Paris, Maine.

Several members of our class participated in the Hamilton Prize Speaking contest.

In May, we sponsored a Junior Prom, which was as successful as our other activities have been this year.

The Student Council has done many things this year. We sponsored three dances; the Halloween Dance, the Christmas Prom, and the Winter Carnival Dance. Karen Berry and Barry Spaulding were chosen king and queen at the Winter Carnival Dance.

We started a dress-up day which was very popular with the students whereby everyone dressed-up on the days that assemblies were held.

We put out questionnaires for suggestions from the students and also a news letter for the student body. This newsletter gave the students information about their representatives and about the Student Council.

We were represented at the State Student Council Convention by five members: Jeanette Hall, Edwina Laughton, Donna Pelkie, Connie Bishop, and Martha Allen. Connie ran for State secretary. We had a good time at this convention at Presque Isle.

We attended the Regional Conference at Fairfield, March 25, 1961. Connie led a discussion group. Margo Buker ran for secretary.

We conducted an open student council meeting on February 10 for an assembly.

We have had a very successful year and would like to thank Mr. Hamlin for his assistance during our meetings and at the convention.

We sponsored the Hartland Academy Invitational Basketball Tournament for the surrounding grammar school teams. This proved to be very successful. With the proceeds from this and from the H. A. jackets and sweatshirts, which we sold, we plan to buy girls' basketball uniforms.

We would like to express our sincere gratitude to Mr. Stedman and Mr. Libby, our advisors, for their patience and guidance.

THE NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

The main purpose of the National Honor Society is to pay tribute to the outstanding members of the student body, outstanding not only for scholastic ability but also for having high quality of character, service, and leadership. Money is raised through a scholarship drive each spring to provide financial aid to certain seniors selected from several applications. This serves as an initiative to other students to develop these qualities within themselves.

At the beginning of the year, we put out a school newspaper, "Snoop's Scoops" with news and gossip from the student body. This was quite a successful undertaking. A party was given for the honor students of the first ranking period. We had as entertainment, a German student from the University of Maine who spoke on Germany and the German educational system. Christmas gifts were exchanged and refreshments were served. Similar parties were planned for each quarter.

The Hartland Academy chapter of the National Honor Society served as host to all Central Maine League chapters at the initiation ceremony for new members. This colorful event was presented at the Hartland Consolidated School on May 4, 1961.

We wish to thank Mr. Stedman for the help he has given us this year.

My how it's growing—this library of ours! With the help of our librarian, Mr. Jackins, and the student librarians, we have increased our knowledge of books and authors.

We should also give credit to the people who have been kind enough to donate books to our library, and we thank the Hartland Extension Association for their cash gift. Our fiction section is increasing rapidly and there is seldom a minute when these books aren't in use.

Here is a place where one can get much current information to help with school work. Whether it's a theme to write or some facts we need for a school subject, we have our library to go to.

Library Club officers are: President, Diane Ballard; V. President, Donna Knight; Secretary-treasurer, Shirley Merrill. Parliamentarian, Faye Jones.

Our first major project was titled "Get Out the Vote". Its purpose was to provide free baby-sitters for parents to encourage them to go to the polls on election day.

The "Harvest Dance" was held November 10. It was profitable, both fun-wise and money-wise.

The annual Christmas party was held in the Homemaking department where we played games, shared gifts and enjoyed delicious refreshments.

On January 19, Reverend Reuben Martin of Newport talked with us on dating and family life. He was a tremendous speaker and left us with many new and stimulating thoughts.

On April 31, we observed "Family Church Day". This project was an attempt to encourage our families to attend church together and as a club group. We hoped to stimulate enough interest in this so that other groups will sponsor a similar day.

Our last formal meeting was held on May 25 when the new officers were installed and the mothers of all members were honored with a rose, the flower symbol of our organization.

We enjoyed our many other activities and especially our annual spring and fall outings.

Improvements were made on the slope on Peasley's Hill and trips to out-of-town slopes were enjoyed by all.

On March 18 the club sponsored a Winter Carnival. Other schools were invited and H. A. made a good showing in all of the events.

We wish to thank Mr. Libby for his enduring patience and we are looking forward to another year of smooth skiing.

The office staff this year has worked to improve the operation of the office. We greet visitors, answer the telephone, do typing for Mr. Hamlin and the other teachers, and do other general office work.

It has given us an opportunity to put into actual practice some of the theories we have learned in the classrooms.
