LITERATURE

STUDY?

As soon as I sit down to study, things start happening. It makes no difference if it is right after school or at 10 p.m., somebody always has something else for me to do. If it isn't "wash the dishes," it's "get up and answer the phone," even though someone else is sitting right next to it. "It's probably for you anyway," they always say. It never is!

Let's take last night for example. After the dishes were done, I went to my room and started in on World Geography. Did I get the first page read? Not on your life! In came my mother. "Your cat wants to go out." Instead of letting him out herself, she came all the way to my room so that I could do it. Well that cat went out all right—with a little help because by then he didn't want to go out anymore. Next somebody calls me on the phone. "What was the English assignment? Of course I was there but can't you tell me what it was?"

After that it's, "Why don't you come and watch this TV. show?", or "Go see what Kevin wants," or "Why don't you wash all the dishes for a change? I never have seen anyone as lazy as you are."

And then comes time for the rank card. "Can't you get better ranks than this?" they ask. "They're disgraceful. Why don't you ever do any studying? Well, I guess you'll have to stay at home until you bring these grades up. And no more allowance either unless you start doing something to earn it. A girl with these grades doesn't deserve any money to spend unless she earns it."

Parents! Won't they ever learn?

E.T.V.

"3, 4, 1, 2, 5, 6, No, it's not a jumbled-up version of the countdown. This is tomorrow's schedule," says the booming voice over the intercom.

The scene is Hartland Academy and the booming voice is Lot Samlin's—Principal. The explanation: E.T.V. has struck.

Yes, that modern wonder of the educational world has struck dear old H. A. and Mrs. Tooper's English classes are exploring the world of Thornton Wilder through the use of "visuals" and the expert comments of Cliffden Fadimen.

Shhhh—We'll go into the classroom quietly and see just what's going on. There's Mr. Samlin up front trying to adjust the set. There! I guess he's got it pretty clear. Mrs. Tooper's up back with us. She sort of over-sees—Oh, the show's starting now. You'll notice that all of the students take notes. In fact, they are so busy writing that they miss half of the benefits from the "visuals".

Actually that's about all there is to it. The students will come in each day until the lesson is completed. Mrs. Tooper will hold a question-and-answer period over each day's lesson. At the end of the week, she'll give a test. Some of the kids will flunk, others will pass it all right, and you can be sure that one or two will get a hundred.

Come on now. We'd better leave. Careful now, don't trip over the cord. Shut the door easily.

There! Now you've seen ETV in action. Not too impressive is it? Well, don't let it fool you. ETV is an important new development and through the efforts of the Fadimens, Samlins, and Toopers it will grow, and I dare say make our children's learning as markedly different from ours, as our's was from our grandparent's.

FIELD TRIPS: EDUCATIONAL FUN

Spring had sprung and with the announcement of a field trip the class was in a turmoil. Field trips were new to us as we were only Freshmen. The teacher, however, knew very well what was in store.

Our class, feeling very independent, headed down the back path away from the school. We were arranged in six groups of four. Going in the wrong direction and making lots of noise, we were stopped for last minute instructions.

The frustrated teacher told us that this was a learning experience and not simply an afternoon away from school. He further stated that by watching animal life we would see an interesting and worthwhile phase of biology. He then divided us into two major teams: boys against the girls. This disturbed us greatly as boys were not supposed to be afraid of anything anyway and would bring back anything from a live snapping turtle to a hornet's nest. Nevertheless we were determined not to let them win and headed toward the stream. We were told to be quiet and to guard against scaring away wary creatures. I wondered silently which one of us would run the faster.

Presently I saw a snake slither two feet in front of me. It wasn't that it was so terribly big, but it did not have to jump at me or sneak around like that. Anyway it was the last we saw of each other.

The rest of the girls found some green frogs swimming in the stream and spent several minutes just watching them. We observed them catch food with their long vacuum like tongues and talk to each other by expanding their throats. One of the girls got out her specimen jar and proceeded to catch one of these water creatures. Well, after my friend got out of the stream and dried out a bit, we decided to try our luck on some of the land creatures.

The boys at this time were doing quite well and had secured a good sized frog, some ants, and a preying mantis.

We found some grand things under a rotton log: pill bugs, angle worms, and a toad. On the further side of the log, tucked under a rock was a nest of field mice. These were quite gruesome looking as they had no hair and had not yet opened their eyes. We continued to let them lead their own lives for the simple reason that none of us could find courage enough to pick one of them up.

Our instructor was very pleased with all of our findings and declared a tie between the two teams.

We had not seen everything yet. This was proven by this sight to the left of the stream:

There in serene solitude was a pair of beavers assembling their new home. Each took part in the work. He was gnawing a birch tree, and she directed it to the site of the house; together they sealed it in with mud.

At that moment one of the girls sneezed and whap went the beavers tail and the couple disappeared.

All was still and soon we saw a rabbit hop along the opposite side of the bank. What a sight he was. His fur was making the seasonal change and bits of brown could be seen showing through his white winter coat. Finding no food, he disappeared and we silently waited for other animals to appear. We could see nothing but heard the cry of a crow, the distant squawk of a duck and listened to the whispering of the wind in the trees. A sparrow and a robin fluttered in and lit on an overhead branch to complete the picture.

Contentment was here, and peace was all around us, but we had to return to class. Tired, scratched and bruised, we knew that we had gained knowledge and enjoyed doing it.

JUNIOR PROM

I was one of those fortunate?? girls who had a date for the prom.

Sam approached me in study hall. He was the confident type. He grabbed me by the arm, swung me around three or four times, and said, "You'd like to go to the dance with me tomorrow night wouldn't you?" Before I had time to answer, he muttered that he would pick me up at eight o'clock and then he proceeded out the door like a track star.

I was in a dilemma. I wanted very much to go the prom and I didn't have a date—so at eight on Friday I was ready to go. Suddenly, at eight thirty, I heard a noise resembling a siren, smelled rubber burning, and I knew that Sam had just pulled in off the drag strip. Before I could reach for my coat, the horn was blowing. I wanted to wait until he came to the door for me, but I knew that if I didn't dash out madly, he would take off like the X-15.

As I went down the steps, I noticed that he sat slouched at the wheel whistling to himself. I opened the door on my side and got in. Before I was seated, the motor roared and we took off. Instantly, I felt a cold draft. His window was rolled down all the way. My hair appointment had been for nothing. I couldn't ask him to close the window because the song "Let's Twist Again" had taken over.

We arrived at the gym quickly. He cut the motor and leaped out. I sat there thinking that he would come and open my door, but I waited in vain; he was half way up the path. As I stumbled out of the car, I noticed a corsage box on the seat. I called to him and asked him if he wanted it. He just said, "Oh! That is yours." Pinning on the corsage, I galloped after him.

As I got to the door he greeted me with, "I have my ticket, you can get yours at the desk." I was glad then that I never traveled without my "mad" money.

When I turned around, I saw a cloud of smoke. I knew Sam had rushed down to our table. I charged after him.

At the table he chewed gum and tapped his foot to the music, so conversation was impossible. Finally, he asked me to dance, or should I say walk around the floor. As any normal person would, I walked on the bottom of my feet while Sam trodded on the top of them.

In a while, I felt a bear clutch at my arm. Yes, that's right, it was Sam. We flew up the stairs, out the door, and out to the car. That's right again, Sam didn't open my door, he practically pushed me through it, then jumped in on his own side.

As the highway loomed up in front of the driveway I knew I was on my way home. I was dropped like a hot potato on my front doorstep.

As I turned around I saw Sam fly low over the tarred sky. On his tail was a well-known figure in a blue suit, driving a black car, with a bubble gum machine on the top. Coming from this chariot was not the sound of Gabriel's horn but a siren which meant Sam was about to have his wings clipped.

SURVIVAL

Do you know of the untold sufferings of many families after World War II? Here is a story of one average family among the thousands.

It was in the late summer and people all over the world were hoping these would surely be the final months of the war. People who really cared the most, though, were those of central Europe where the war was actually being fought.

One family of two parents, a boy of two and a girl of five were huddled together in their shelter of cardboard boxes and brick rubble knocked from the buildings by many shell blasts. They could hear the roar and thunder of battle only two miles away and could also hear the fire crackling and roaring where the armies had just recently moved through their town.

Venturing out of the pile of brick, he saw what seemed to be one store that was left virtually untouched as if by some miracle. With three pair of anxious eyes watching every step of the way, he walked slowly and kept near the shelter of the buildings. After getting inside the door, he took one glance back at his family through the windows once filled with glass. With a great roar, the building suddenly burst into flames and exploded, throwing the man into the street dead.

The rest of the family, horror stricken and unable to show emotion because of fear, shrank back into the pile of rubble and wondered what fate was planning for the rest of the family.

The answer was soon coming. Out of nowhere, a stray bomb from one of the big bombers fell and with a great blast, lay the small hut of rubble and cardboard flat into the ground. Only the five year old girl came out of the hut alive.

With a glassy stare and slow, painful steps, the girl hobbled down the empty street sobbing softly into her only possession, a blackened, tattered rag doll.

The Student Council is the student government body of Hartland Academy. The main objective of the council is to further the relationship of the student body and to promote good school spirit.

This governing body consists of a varied number of students from each individual class. There are five senior members, four junior, three sophomore, and two freshmen.

One of the major annual projects was the handling of the candy room. Here school supplies and candy are sold.

Through the efforts of the council, Academy students have had the opportunity to watch educational television programs. The student council bought the antenna and rotor and made the arrangements for the use of a television set.

The Student Council sponsored two semi-formal dances, the Christmas Prom and the Winter Carnival Ball.

We are proud of the fact that this year we are a member of the National Association of Student Councils. From them we received information about the activities of the other Student Councils in the country.

Five of our members attended the State Convention in Gorham. They were: Paul Allen, Harlow Pease, Deatra Jones, Margo Buker, and Diane Ballard.

President Paul Allen
Vice-President Candy Buck
Secretary-Treasurer Margo Buker

This year the Boosters' Club sponsored its Second Annual Grammar School Invitational Tournament. This was a successful project with Solon taking top honors while Hartland came in second.

This year we sold candy at home games and served sandwiches to visiting basketball teams. On Winter Carnival Day we sold sandwiches at noon to the visiting skiing teams. With the profits from these and other projects we purchased new uniforms for the girls' basketball team.

The Boosters' Club sponsored the Athletic's Banquet which was held in May.

We would like to thank Mr. Stedman and Mr. Libby, our advisors, for the help and useful ideas they have given us throughout the year.

THE NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

Standing: M. Buker, H. Pease, C. Buck, N. Laughton, D. Ballard.

To be a member of the National Honor Society one must show outstanding scholastic abilities as well as qualities of leadership, character, and service.

The society, through the scholarship fund, financially aids worthy seniors in furthering their education. They are chosen from a number of applicants from the senior class who have been accepted at a college. Various money raising events included a record hop and a tag day. Further financial assistance for our scholarship fund came from soliciting local organizations and individuals.

The honor roll students are given a party sponsored by the National Honor Society at the end of each ranking period. A guest speaker provides the entertainment and refreshments are served. Outstanding programs and speakers this season have been Ethlyn Bowman, graduate from Farmington State Teachers College, Edwina Laughton, student at the University of Maine and Martha Allen, student at Aroostook State Teachers College. Each talked about college life and qualifications. Dean Chan, a Chinese exchange student, also gave a very interesting talk on his native country and his American experiences. Mr. Chan is an exchange student at Hinkley.

The Annual Central Maine initiation ceremonies was held at Hampden on May 3, 1962. New initiates for Hartland Academy were: Seniors—Paul Allen, Gordon Dunlop, Shirley Merrill; Juniors—Diane Ballard; Sophomores—Candy Buck, Nelson Laughton.

The annual National Honor Society Convention was May 12.

We wish to thank Mr. Stedman for all of his suggestions and help this past year.

1. The newspaper, Christian Science Monitor

3. Many new volumes of fiction and non-fiction, including a series on famous Americans and their works.

The library now has slightly over 1400 volumes—1000 titles.

For a project this year, the Library Club is operating a paperback book store. This provides an opportunity for students to obtain books needed for required reports and also aids the students in building up a personal library at little expense.

The Hartland Chapter of the Future Homemakers of America had a very successful and happy year. Our chapter advisor was Mrs. Dean and our chapter mothers were Mrs. Earle Buker, Jr., Mrs. Burton Jones, and Mrs. Kenneth Bishop.

Besides our regular business meetings we planned a social meeting every month. This gave every member a chance for fun.

The F.H.A. sponsored a Harvest Dance and Hayride in November and in December we had our regular Christmas Party at the Home Economics building. At both of the occasions everyone had a good time.

The F. H. A. members and Home Economics girls put on a Fashion Show and Tea on April 12, 1962. This gave the girls a chance to display their talents, and their effort was appreciated by all who attended.

In June, the F. H. A. girls put on a picnic honoring the Senior girls.

At all these and other activities the members greatly enjoyed themselves. We would like to thank Mrs. Dean for all her work and useful ideas.

VARSITY BASKETBALL

The past basketball season was not too successful at H. A. but the team showed a lot of promise for next year. There were only three seniors on the team this year and only two of them were of the starting five. Two of the three highest scorers on the varsity team were freshmen. The three highest scorers were Richard Ricker with 161 points, Chet Hubbard with 101 points, and Dane Allen with 84 points.

The jayvee team had an average season. They had a 3-4 won lost record but two of the games could easily have been victories. In the Searsport game, the team rallied in the final five minutes but lost the game in the last three seconds on foul shots. In the first Brownville Junction game, the jayvees led all the way but Junction pulled away in the last quarter to win. The three highest scorers were Chet Hubbard with 113 points, Fred Morgan with 41, and Bruce Patten with 33.

In benefit games, the teachers beat the varsity 60-57 in five periods. In the alumni game, the varsity beat the grads 58-47.

At Hampden, we played Bingham in the playoffs. We jumped off to an early lead but Bingham came back to lead by 15 points. Then in the last quarter, we came within two points of tying the game but time ran out and we lost the game.

The varsity and jayvee teams wish to thank Mr. Stedman for the many hours he worked with us. Next year, I hope we can give him a real good team and a winning season.

Connie Bishop was the top scorer with 122 points. Carole Buker had 87, Pat Bishop 73, Sally LeVasseur 36, Donna Pelkie 11, and Coleen Webber 7 points.

Susan Stedman, Barbara Laughton, and Diane Curtis were the backbone of the defensive system.

Although we won only two games, we gained a lot of experience and hope for a better season next year.

We, the girls who work in the office, appreciate the opportunity to work and have this experience. Typing papers for the teachers, running office machines, greeting visitors at the door, answering the phone, and waiting on students gives us a chance to put our training to work.

We would like to thank Mr. Hamlin, our principal, for giving us this opportunity.
