LOVE

Love
Is many things.
It is joy
And sorrow.
It is spring
And fall.
It lifts to the heights
Of ecstasy,
And drops to the deepest depths
Of despair.
Love is sharing
And wanting.
Love
Is many things.

GONE

She picked the flower
A daisy it was.
Slowly she pulled each white petal,
Knowing how it would end.

He was gone,
Just as the daisy had gone.
Perhaps someday
She might have another .

Somebody had taken him,
Away from her.
He was gone.
Her puppy.

GOING TO BED ON A COLD WINTER'S NIGHT

To those of you who have never experienced the thrill of getting into an ice-cold bed in the dead of winter, I would like to say that there must be something missing in your life. To those of you who have just started to get a bit warm by the time the alarm goes off, I know just how you feel.

In theory the perfect bedroom should be heated and the bed would have a nice warm electric blanket. Unfortunately this theory is not a fact for the most of us. The room is unheated because our parents think that it is unhealthy to sleep in a warm room. The only thing the room lacks from the outdoors is snow and a strong wind. Over in the corner sits our trusty little bed, under at least a five foot stack of covers.

Now that the scene is set, it is time for our hero to enter. He has been huddled up next to the trusty stove and dreading the time he will have to brave the elements and strike out for the bed. Finally, the dreaded time arrives, and our hero makes a mad dash for the bathroom, which is, fortunately, heated. Upon reaching his first goal, he starts to "Dress" for bed. He pulls on a second pair of long-johns before putting on his heavy duty all weather, insulated pajamas. Next comes a pair of woolen socks and a pair of mittens. Now our hero fills three hot water bottles for the long night, and he is now ready to set out for bed. He slowly opens the door a crack and peers into the darkness. He knows that somewhere out there is his bed and that he must find it. In a bold move our hero throws the door open and makes a mad dash for the bed. He grabs the covers, throws them back, and jumps in. Now our hero is settled for a long night's sleep—or should we say freeze? Yes, sleeping in a cold bed is an experience that no person should pass up.

THE STORM

It was hot and the air felt steamed. The grass and trees seemed suspended in space. With great effort the brisk wind of early morning was holding its breath. Time dragged at the wall clock like a huge weight, as the bronze hands struggled toward the noon hour. The sun sat motionless at its zenith, as though angry at us, and poured its wrath upon the house, barn, and young corn. Jane and I sat on the back porch, waiting for the storm.

At noon it came. The clouds piled up like mountains of popcorn, then rushed at us like an avalanche. They blotted out the sun. The wind began to blow from the northwest, swinging the new windmill around to face the storm. The breeze brought instant relief from the heat, but it heralded a flood.

We ran inside and closed the windows. Going to the front door, we prepared to watch one of Nature's fits of glory, with only the screen door between us and its fury.

It came all at once, drowning everything in sound and water. The raindrops, drumming, on the roof, blended with the thunder to form the symphony of the storm. The semi-darkness was cut again and again by lightning flashes as they followed their devious routes to the water drenched earth. The metal wash tub under the drain spout quickly filled, and the overflow made a river on the lawn. The deluge had turned the dirt road into another Amazon. Gusts of wind blew the rain in on us, but we stayed in the doorway, watching.

At twenty minutes past twelve the torrent died to a sprinkle. As quickly as it had been snuffed out the sun returned, its warmth comforting after the chill of the rain. We went out and stood on the front steps. The huge rainbow, arching over the woods, told us the storm was over. The corn, straight and glistening, had come through all right. It meant a good harvest in the fall.

We stood there on the steps. I looked at Jane, her red hair shone in the warm sunlight. The freshly washed scenery sparkled, robins, and cat-birds sang in the grapevines along the road. Yes, this was living! It felt good!

STRENGTH

The psalmist said
Lift thine eyes unto the hills
From whence cometh your strength.

Silly man.

Didn't he know that
Hills are but rocks and stone
And strength but a condition of the mind
Found within?

The student council acts as a median between the student body and the faculty.

This year the student council took on the task of painting the school sign and putting up a light for it. Our chapter also attended the State Student Council Convention at Calais. Birney Moore ran for second vice president. Although he didn't win we feel that we were well represented.

LIBRARY CLUB

This year the Library Club undertook the task of reorganizing the library. It was a long, hard job, but due to the untiring efforts of its members, the Club was able to make a subject card, a title card, and an author's card for each book according to the Dewey Decimal System. The books were also renumbered. The library is continually growing with the frequent addition of new books.

The members of the Library Club are very fortunate to have the opportunity to work in the library, because they gain a better knowledge of how the library operates.

The Hartland Academy Baseball Team concluded one of its finest seasons in recent years with a 7-1 record and thus becoming co-champions of the Central Maine League with Brownville Junction.

The season was highlighted by a no-hit game pitched by Dana Morgan, a freshman, against Higgins Classical Institute.

The entire team wishes to thank Mr. Osgood for the many hours of work and instruction which he has given us to make us a "championship" ballteam. We hope that we can repay him for his efforts by winning the championship again in 1965.

Sporting their new uniforms, but showing the same old fighting spirit, the varsity cheerleaders contributed a lot to the success of the Academy basketball teams this year. They earned many expressions of praise for their good sportsmanship and clever cheering routines. We are looking forward to continued good work as the entire varsity squad is back next year.

Also deserving recognition are the Jayvee Cheerleaders. They developed into a good unit as they gained experience during the year.
