GRADUATION

Jane had been worried sick for months over the problem which had confronted her continuously ever since she had been old enough to go to school. She had always had to wear her older sister Shirley's clothes, on every occasion. Every time Jane wanted a new dress for a party, school dance, or something else, her mother always made the same reply. "That blue one of Shirley's would be just right for you, my dear," or "it would be such a waste of money when you can wear Shirley's blue one." She hadn't minded wearing Shirley's clothes in grade school. At that time she thought it was fun, but now the fun had all worn off. It was different in high school, because everyone remembered your sister and the clothes she wore, especially if she were pretty like Shirley and had just graduated the year before.

Jane had been hoping against hope right up until the last, that the girl would vote to wear caps and gowns instead of formal evening dresses, but they didn't. Now she heard cries and exclamations of all the girls saying what they were going to wear. She heard Joan Strong saying "Mother will make me a yellow one—she promised she would." All the others were saying that they would have this and they would have that, while Jane had known all along that she would have to wear Shirley's powder blue dress, the very one she had worn only last year.

Jane crept home sick at heart, and left the girls to talk over their dresses. She thought of all the occasions on which she had had to wear Shirley's clothes: the Junior and Senior Proms, the years before, all the parties, proms, and many dances she had had to wear them. Oh, why couldn't she have a new dress at her graduation, one of the most important events of her life? But she knew she wouldn't have one.

Jane was so broken-hearted about it that you can just imagine her cry of surprise and joy when her mother said at dinner, "I see the girls have decided to wear evening dresses again this year, haven't they Jane? We'll go right downtown this afternoon to look for one." But of all the dresses Jane looked at, she shook her head. None of them seemed to appeal to her. She seemed to be comparing all the dresses to the one of Shirley's. None of them seemed to compare to that one. One of the salesladies said, "Of course you won't cherish a dress until it has a few memories."

Suddenly Jane said, "Mother, let's go home! Shirley's dress will be perfect for me to graduate in." Mother just smiled and said, "All right," but Jane didn't hear her. She was thinking. "Didn't it carry Shirley safely down the aisle to receive her diploma? And it will me. The saleslady was right, a dress has to have a few memories."

THE PRICE OF WAR

In the spring of 1930 two boys were playing in the sun in the backyard of an apartment building in the suburbs of Chicago. These two boys were blond-haired Jimmy Canton and red-cheeked Dick Bradford. Dick was an orphan and lived with Jim and his parents. Dick was eight years old and Jimmy was nine. On this occasion the boys were talking about what they wanted to be when they grew up. Jimmy wanted to be a policeman and be one of those men in blue who upheld law and order. Dick didn't know exactly what he wanted to be; said he guessed he'd be a banker.

The years roll by and Jim and Dick are nearing graduation from college. Jim's wish to be a policeman is fulfilled because he has signed up and passed the examination. He will be taken into the ranks shortly after graduation. Dick has decided that he wants to be a doctor and is going to medical school in the coming fall.

After graduation Jimmy becomes a patrolman in Troop C of the Chicago police. Dick is doing well in medical school.

On June 31st Jim is married to the girl of his dreams, a very pretty young girl who had gone to high school with him. They buy a small home in Chicago and settle down.

Then came the fateful day of December 7, 1941. Japan bombed Hawaii and the United States was at war! Dick, immediately after hearing of the attack by the Japanese, left medical school and enlisted in the United States Marine Corps. Jim was not so much affected at that time as he had a swell job and a swell wife. But on May 12th, 1942, he heeded the call of Uncle Sam and joined the United States Army.

On December 8th, 1942, Dick came home on furlough, the last before being shipped overseas. He had shiny, new second lieutenant bars on his coat and was being assigned to medical duty overseas on his return. Jim was stationed in Texas and was expected home sometime in December. Dick had just boarded an outgoing train and was just pulling out as Jim's train pulled into the station. They never did get to see each other.

As Jim stepped down from the train he saw a beautiful young woman, baby in arms, rush toward him. It was his wife, Mary, and his son, Donald, whom he had never seen. The young couple spent the few days of freedom as fully as they could. Then came the day of departure, and as Jim glanced out the window he had the feeling that he would never come back. He watched the fading lights of the city drop below the horizon and then went to sleep, dreaming of his wife and small son.

In July of 1943, Jim's mother received a message from the War Department. Lieutenant Dick Canton had been badly wounded. He had been with a unit of soldiers surrounded by Germans and cut off from supplies. His unit was cut to pieces and he was left for dead. Later, he was found by a patrol of the Seventh Army.

This was only the first blow of what was to come.

Jim's mother and his wife rejoiced over his last letter. He was feeling well; had been promoted to staff sergeant and expected to be shipped home soon.

But a sudden twist of Fate did not leave it this way. Jim's mother received her second telegram from the War Department. Jim was dead. He had been cut down by a sniper's bullet on Saipan.

In December of 1943 Dick was discharged from the Marine Corps. He was blind and had lost the lower half of his left arm. The future he had planned for himself was lost forever.

All this misery was brought on by one thing—war. And because of war many thousands of American and foreign boys lose their lives and limbs and are disabled forever. If more people would stop and analyze what war means, perhaps many would-be dictators might never come to be.

When countries and nations get angry with each other, they often turn to war, not thinking of the consequences; thus they destroy themselves and others. Should this continue? Must the world always be in fear of war? I think that if some people tried a little harder to understand each other, all this could be spared. This story of two boys is a story of many thousands of people, and could happen all over again if we, and other countries, do not proceed in the future with more caution.

MIRACLE OF THE TEN-CENT PIECE

Johnny never thought that just seeing a pretty girl moving down the aisle of a Pullman car would start the wedding march humming in his head, but it did.

His friend, Mort, slouched beside him, growled, "What's eating you?"

"Three days in Los Angeles and nothing happens, but on the way back to camp I see the only person who would make me save my money. This is it. It's never happened to me before," said Johnny thoughtfully.

Mort turned around and looked at her and said to Johnny, "Well, she's not married—no ring."

Johnny inquired, "Did she see you looking?"

Mort replied, "Sure."

"Mort," Johnny said slowly, "do you believe in miracles?"

Mort thought aimlessly for a few minutes and replied, "Sometimes." Just then the conductor passed through the car calling, "Next stop, Riverdale. Bus for Camp Lyne, soldier."

The train stopped with a slight jerk. The young lady got up from her seat, talked with the conductor a few minutes. Soon the conductor came up to Mort and Johnny, who were pushing their way through the aisle, and said,

"I guess you are the one she meant—told me to give you this." In Johnny's palm lay a ten-cent piece. Johnny stared at it. "Take it, it's your dime's worth of luck," shouted Mort.

"She said it belonged to her father who was in the First World War. It was his lucky piece." The conductor grinned. "She said, 'that soldier looks as if he might be able to use it, and this dime might help him!'"

Johnny was somewhat surprised and handled the coin very carefully. As soon as he left the train he sought the girl out and found her standing in the station. "I—er I just wanted to thank you for the dime," stammered Johnny. They walked out on the platform and the fragrance of orange and lemon blossoms could be smelled from nearby groves.

"I am Sally Ashton," she said. "My father and I have a citrus orchard a few miles from town."

"I would like to meet your father sometime. May I come out and see him?" questioned Johnny.

"Friday," she said, and gave him her address. Her eyes shining as she said good-bye, and Johnny started toward the bus.

Mort, who had been in the station, came up to the girl and said, "Sooner or later my friend is going to look at the date on that dime. There was no war in 1913"

"Yes, I know," she whispered.

"What's it all about?" demanded Mort.

"My father was in the First World War even if the dime wasn't. He lost his hearing, and to help him, I learned lip reading and taught it to him," she confessed.

"Holy cow!" exclaimed Mort, "you knew every word we said."

"Yes, but please don't tell him," she begged.

The bus driver honked his horn for the start and Mort ran to the bus, saying to himself, "I guess miracles do happen."

TRUE LOVE WILL PREVAIL

It is one o'clock in the morning in the small, typical mid-western town of Hoitville. The town is dark except for the street lights, but wait, what's this? There are two lighted windows in widely separated sections of town. Let us first investigate the one in 45 West Ave. Hmm, the house is a modest one, done in green and white as most of those in town are. Let us look through this lighted window.

What? A boy of about 17 is writing a letter. What is he saying?

"Heck. I can't think of anything to say so she'll know I'm sorry. Let me think. How'll I fix it so she'll wish she hadn't thrown me over? It was silly, anyway. Just 'cause I squirted her with the hose when she had her new clothes on was no reason for her to fly off the handle the way she did. I know! I'll date someone else! That'll show her she can't fool around with Willie Jones. No, siree! I'll see Tom first thing in the morning and have him get me a date. Then I guess she'll wish she hadn't got so mad!"

And now, let's go across town to number 103 West Ave. Well, what a coincidence. Here is a girl of about 16 or 17, and she is also writing a letter, or was. She seems to have given up. She seems a bit, shall we say, irritated? What's she saying?

"If there were only some way I could get back at him. To think he would do such a thing. I don't see how he expected me not to get mad. Well, I'll fix him. I'll show Mr. William Jones a thing or two. I'll date some other boy for the Junior Prom and then I guess he'll squirm! Jane will know of some boy I can date. I'll see her first thing in the morning. I guess Willie'll wish he hadn't squirted me with that hose!"

Well, it looks as if fate would have quite a time here. We'll see what happens tomorrow.

"Now you see why I've just got to date someone else, don't you, Tom?"

"Well, in a way, yes, but why not just go and tell Mary that you're sorry?"

"But, Tom, I couldn't. It's the principle of the thing. I've got to save my face, so-to-speak."

"Well, O. K. But I still think you ought to make up with her."

Now let us go to Room 5B, where Jane and Mary are talking.

"But, Mary, why not tell him you're sorry for getting mad. After all, dating another fellow is pretty drastic."

"Well, you see, Jane, I want to make him stop taking for granted, and maybe this is the way to do it."

"All right, I'll find you a fellow, but I still think very little of it."

And now Fate steps in, for you see Tom and Jane are very good friends and they are getting together to study, so—

"Jane, you know what I think we ought to do? We ought to—" From here on, much whispering is heard.

"Why, Tom, that's a wonderful idea, and it will bring them together, too. Oh, I'm so happy."

Everything is wonderful. It is a week later and in Hoitville everyone is happy. The Junior Prom is coming off that night. Everyone is happy, that is, except Willie and Mary. Willie is now going to call for his date, who is staying at Jane's. As he climbs into his er, er, "car," he sighs mournfully. "I wish it were Mary I were taking." Now he is at Jane's and as he rings the bell, he says wonderingly, "I hope she's pretty."

Meanwhile, Mary has been getting ready, not too cheerfully, and she also sighs and wonders what her date is like. Then she hears the doorbell and she slowly descends the stairs. But wait, who is this gallant knight in shining armor? Why, it's Willie.

We will now tactfully draw the curtain over this moment of bliss. And as it has many times before, "True love has prevailed."

BEFORE US IS LIFE

Before us lies a life which looms exciting and adventurous. It appears as a challenge which urges us on. Life is an intriguing thing and from our hearts it calls forth wild cries of joy and of sorrow. We hear before us the songs of life which cause hearts to pound and our brains to throb like the great beating of the jungle drums. We have wonderful and exotic visions of our March of Time and Freedom which stirs us to our greatest depths and produces a feeling of ecstasy and jubilation. Life places upon us a necessity to succeed and to better ourselves; to find security and the feeling of certainty. It is the uncertainty and the quality of daring which delights us and charms us as though magic were forever about us. Before us the door of a new world opens into an exciting and daring life for all, which is filled with many new experiences and adventures.

AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?

Oh, I wish I could spin a great yarn,
One that no one happens to know.

I'd weave it so queer

You'd be anxious to hear

How the tail of my tale was to go.

THE GHOST WHO NEVER WAS

Rain come down in sheets, lightning flashed across the sky, and thunder rolled over the countryside. Two teenage girls, Betty Allen and Ann Rivers, had been caught in the rain. They were running as fast as they could go. It had seemed such a good idea for the girls to go on a picnic, and when Betty's mother offered to drive them to the picnic grounds they had just laughed and said it was such a lovely day that they would walk. It was two miles to the grounds. The girls had arrived, eaten their dinner and rested for a while. Then seeing black clouds in the sky, they decided it would be wise to start home. About half a mile later it started to rain and soon the girls could not see where they were going. Gasping, Betty leaned up against a tree.

"I just can't go any farther. I'm drenched to the skin, and don't expect to get any drier. What on earth will we do?"

"You've got me," answered Ann.

A sudden idea came to Betty and she said:

"Ann, isn't that the old Morley house just around the corner? Bet we could get in there. Let's try."

Ann shook her head.

"Oh no, you don't get me in there. That place is haunted."

"Oh, Ann, don't be silly. Surely you don't believe in ghosts at your age."

"Well, maybe I don't believe in them," replied Ann, "but I'd sure hate to meet one."

"But it only stands to reason that we can't stay out here in the rain all night," said Betty.

"I'd rather stay out here and know I'd still be here in the morning than to go to that old Morley house and let a ghost carry me away."

Betty grabbed Ann's hand.

"Come on, baby, I'm not going to let us catch pneumonia."

Reluctantly Ann followed her.

Soon they were racing up the steps of the old Morley house. It looked gray and foreboding in the rain. Ann pulled back when they reached the door, but Betty kept a firm grip on her hand. The door would not open, so they tried the windows. Finally they found one which they could crawl through. They found themselves in a dark, dusty smelling hall. Cobwebs were everywhere. Ann shuddered at the darkness of the place. Betty started down the hall. Now that she was in the place she kind of wished she were somewhere else. But as long as they were here she might as well explore a bit. She was walking down the hall when all of a sudden her feet were no longer on the floor but she was sailing through space. She hit bottom with a thud. For a minute she was stunned, then she put out her hand and grasped something damp and slimy. With a scream of fright she picked herself up. She stood still trying to see through the semi-darkness. There were no windows in the place and seemed to be no doors. She went around and around trying to find a door. Suddenly she pressed a button, and a skeleton glared at her. Again she screamed, and ran to the other side of the room. There she found another button. The wall rolled open, and she saw a small passageway. As soon as she entered, the wall closed behind her. She turned corner after corner. Suddenly as she turned one corner she ran straight into a white figure. Her first thought was "Ghost." She started to run but it caught her. From inside the thing she heard, "Betty." This stopped her. She looked at it. Emerging from a white sheet was Ann. She grasped Betty's arm and cried, "Let's get out of here. I've seen the most horrible things. I saw a ghost I tell you, a real live one. So I grabbed this sheet, hoping it would think I was one too. Let's go."

The girls raced to the end of the corridor. There they found a door which led outside. The rain had lessened and they ran for home. They said nothing to their parents about their experience.

The next morning Betty's mother replied at the breakfast table. "Betty, you ought to go over to the old Morley place. A movie set from Hollywood was set up there yesterday. They are making some sort of a horror movie. They've put up ghosts, skeletons, and everything else to make it 'scary.' They say it is very realistic."

That was about all Betty could stand. She ran to her room, and her mother heard her murmur as she went:

"Ghosts, ghosts, ghosts!"

HISTORY OF HARTLAND, MAINE

Doctor John Warren came from Boston, Mass., in 1799 to settle this area, called the Warren Township, which included St. Albans, Hartland and Palmyra. It later became a plantation. At various times the region has been known as Berlin, Fair Haven and Wiggins Hill. The first settlement was on the Jude Cook Hill, which is not in St. Albans. The people lived in log cabins. The first winter the ice didn't thaw and sickness and death caused the people to move to the top of the hill. James Fuller started a settlement near what is now Fuller's Corner. The Lance family, who were cousins to Franklin Pierce, started a settlement in Palmyra. The old tavern still stands in Palmyra. Until 1864 the Hartland line ran through Harrington's house. The St. Albans area started at the end of the Hartland line and ran to the Libby House. Hartland included 30,000 acres and St. Albans 26,000 acres.

At the time of the Civil War the militia training was held on the Goodwin farm near Fuller's Corner. This area was settled because of the water ways, of which there are only a few good ones in the State.

William Moor and his wife from Gorham, N. H., moved to Skowhegan and later came here through the woods; his trail became known as the Notch Road. He had a large family and entered into the lumbering business in 1884. He erected the first dam across the Sebasticook River.

Doctor Calvin Blake, who was well known in Maine, was also the Justice of the Peace.

Sheep were raised in the area where Dr. Briggs now lives.

Mr. Linn bought wood from the farmers to use in his woolen mill. The ells on Rae Randlett's and the Litchfield house are the two oldest in town. Mr. Hascol, who was a dentist, built the house where Ervin Martin now lives. Captain Joseph Arland had widespread influence over the community. An Indian settlement was started along the Horseback on Pittsfield Avenue. The Abanakers settled near Rae Randlett's. They had settlements near the trestle. A boy who was from this area and who hadn't seen his folks for a long time returned to guide Benedict Arnold here. Arnold and his men drank water from the well in the stonewall at Bertha Rowell's and camped at Butterfield's Cove. North Canaan and North Pittsfield were set apart from Hartland. The English, Irish, and Scots settled in this area. The first railroad came here in 1886, at which time the people were given free rides.

Linn came here in 1852 and started a woolen mill. He had his office in what is now the town library. The hills around Hartland were called the Alps. At Devil's Head stone was quarried. Some of the slabs are still there. This stone was used until cement became common. Horses broke their legs hauling it.

At Moose Pond is the old Harmony Castle which has always been owned by wealthy people and is now used as a private club house.

Several persons from Hartland became famous: Llewellyn Powers, governor; James Baker, governor; Bartlett, minister to Austria; Clyde Smith, congressman. Silas Renall started the first church here, which was called the "Church of God." In 1823 the Baptist church was started. The church was dedicated to Mrs. Linn. Reverends Hart and Hascomb were two of the first ministers here.

The library was started on December 30th, 1903. The president was A. W. Miller, and helpers were Mrs. Osborne and J. Watt.

In 1904 and 1905 there were a thousand volumes in the library. Mrs. Smith was assistant librarian. The first tannery was built in 1828. At that time hemlock was used to tan leather and farmers earned quite a lot of money from hemlock trees which they sold.

Fuller and Osborne ran a shirt shop until the depression.

In 1924 the Academy burned. The present building is the result of adding to what was left of the old building. The first principal was Jonathan Barker, a Maine poet. Addie Billings was the first teacher and lady assistant.

IN THE WOODS

In the woods of silent splendor
Birds of all descriptions slumber;
Some in trees of sturdy brown
Some in nests upon the ground.

In the woods the squirrels play,
Minding not the night or day—
Some of red and some of gray
In the woods when it is May.

In the woods the deer are fleeing
Full of vigor, vim and needing
Knowing not that man is speeding
To stalk the white-tails soon for bleeding.

In the woods of silent splendor,
In the woods where men doth plunder,
Death blows strikes like clasps of thunder—

In the woods of silent splendor.

We lost three members, Joann Southard, Ruth Sherburne, and Hartley Gardner, but welcomed two new ones, Harold Whitney and Donald Haskell.

The class is under the supervision of the following officers: President, Natalie Clement; Vice-President, Vaughn Stedman; Secretary, Faye Cool; Treasurer, Beverly Neal.

The class is well represented in all varsity sports.

The Sophomore Hop, which is presented annually by the Sophomores, was held November 12th.

FRESHMAN CLASS

The Freshman Class consists of forty-five fun-loving and average-working students. A good percentage of this class participates in such sports as winter sports, basketball, baseball, and softball.

Our class officers are: President, Patricia Scribner; Vice-President, James Jamieson; Secretary, Donald Deering; Treasurer, Dolores Stedman.

Freshman Initiation was really laughable with all the girls and boys dressed in a funny array of costumes. Some were pushing doll carriages, some were carrying wastebaskets and fishing poles, while part of the boys were dressed as women, and some of the girls as men. A number of boys and girls when called to the stage really got "the works." One had to juggle three eggs (which he couldn't do, then, for a penalty, he had to push an egg across the stage with his nose. This is only one of the very comical things we had to do.

That same day we elected a King and a Queen for the Reception, and they were revealed to everyone at the Reception as Queen, Ethlyn Wheeler, and King, Gaston Boulanger. As Gaston was absent, Kendell Strong, second in favor, took his place. The King and Queen were crowned at intermission.

The Latin Club is one of the many clubs at Hartland Academy. Meetings are held twice a month. Serving as President is Natalie Clement; Vice-President, Joanne Jamieson; Secretary, Ida Mae Buker; Treasurer, Patricia Scribner.

The members of the Latin Club are: Ida Mae Buker, Joanne Jamieson, Natalie Clement, Patricia Scribner, Arthur Coburn, Joan Morgan, Rita Bunker, Dorothy Neal, Betty Lou Emery, Opal Libby, Beverly Nichols and Glenice Martin.

The Latin and French clubs put on a joint Christmas assembly Friday, December 17.

Hartland Academy plans to have a Winter Carnival the twenty-sixth of February, to be held on the mountain. That evening after the Hartland Carnival, the Latin Club has planned a Snow Ball Dance, at which the coronation of the King and Queen will take place. The F. H. A. girls are to prepare a baked bean supper for this event.

FRENCH CLUB

The French Club was reorganized this year with Miss Moore as our advisor. Ten members enrolled. At our first meeting we elected the following officers: President, Joanne Jamieson; Vice-President, Beverly Neal; Secretary, Geraldine Lucas; Treasurer, Nathalie Estes.

It was voted to hold meetings every other Friday in Room 3. We voted to discharge members if they were absent from the club more than three times with no excuse. Members were allowed an unlimited amount of excuses.

For activities we put on a Christmas assembly with the Latin Club. We are now corresponding with French high schools in France and Belgium. This is being enjoyed by all.

LIBRARY CLUB

This is the second year of the Library Club, and this year it is under the supervision of Miss Berglund. It consists of the president, Nathalie Estes; secretary-treasurer, David Huff; and the following members: Norman Bailey, Rita Bunker, Chester Carson, Beverly Davis, Virginia Davis, Carolyn Davis, Ronald Hughes, and Evelyn Noble.

This year we have a librarian who is present at all times in the Library, including noon times. This keeps the library in order at all times, and supplies the students with the necessary books and magazines.

One rule that we are especially trying to enforce is that no one who is not on the Honor Roll may use the magazines during study periods, because we hope that if they cannot use the magazines, they will devote more time to their studies, and so earn that privilege.

We would appreciate students' cooperation in observing all the rules of the library and in helping to keep its standards as high as possible.

Virginia Davis '51

OFFICE CLUB

Under the supervision of Mrs. Dummer, who is our efficient secretary, there are ten office students. Those students have various duties to perform: keeping records, counting money, selling tablets and pencils. Selling candy, one of last year's major jobs, has been taken over by the various classes and clubs to raise money for debts. This has been a big relief for the office group.

The following students spend one period a day in the office: Rosalie Gordon, Joan Perry, David Huff, Patricia Bragg, Merlene Lewis, Shirley Merrill, Delores Stedman. These other girls are alternates: Patricia Scribner, Virginia Fox, and Margaret Bizeau.

Most of these girls have acquired some skill in typing and bookkeeping, and we give our thanks to Mrs. Dummer, who has given us this opportunity.

STUDENT COUNCIL

The first meeting of the Student Council of 1948 and 1949 was held on November 1, 1948, for the purpose of electing officers, who are as follows: President, Richard Nichols; Vice-President, Lloyd Cookson; Secretary, Nathalie Estes; and Treasurer, Vaughn Stedman. The classes are represented by the following members: Senior Class—Richard Nichols, Nathalie Estes, Lloyd Cookson, Clara Burdin, Ivan Estes, Junior Class—Natalie Clement, Vaughn Stedman, Joyce Pelkie, Mary Ellen Stilson; Sophomore Class—George Soule, Webster Baird, Raymond Martin;

Freshman Class—Patricia Scribner, Daniel Snowman. Mr. Dummer is our faculty advisor.

Some of the problems confronting the Council this year were: How to use the profits made in the magazine campaign, and how to deal with those students who persistently clutter up the building by leaving paper on the floor and by throwing chalk and erasers. We decided to give the magazine profits to athletics in general. As for the latter question, we decided upon a method of punishment to be inflicted upon such persons.

Nathalie Estes '49

Athletics

BASEBALL

The baseball boys had a fair season last year, but because of bad weather they got very little practice. They were lucky to get all the games, even if they did have to play some of them in the wet. Because of rain they had to make two trips to Hermon to get the games played. Coach Pippin started the season with eight lettermen, all of them being seniors and on the first team. This spring we will have to start with a new team and we are looking forward to a successful season.

Ivan Estes '49

SOFTBALL

The softball team was started this year with nearly every girl in school out for the sport.

We had a very eventful season, winning all our league games, therefore gaining us the trophy.

The first team, the coach, two substitutes and the manager were presented with silver softballs by the Athletic Association. Girls on the first team were Faye Cool, Mary Ellen Stilson, Sally Lucas, Ruth Page, Beverly Neal, Joanne Jamieson, Janice Frost, Gwenith Neal, Patricia Bragg. The manager was Winnie Mower and the coach was Mrs. Knight.

 Third Row: I. Marson, B. Emery, I. Buker, G. Martin, S. Merrill, J. Vining, P. Scribner.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The basketball girls started season's practice with 18 girls out for the sport. This was quite different from last year, when not enough girls came out to have two teams for scrimmage.

Only two members were lost from last year's team. Their places were taken by Mary Ellen Stilson and Ethelyn Wheeler. The first team was made up of Mary Ellen Stilson cf, Faye Cool lf, Ethelyn Wheeler rf, Mariellyn Hughes cg, Natalie Clement lg, Joanne Jamieson rg.

The first game of the season was with Corinna, who had defeated the team last year for the championship. A great deal of rivalry existed between the two teams, and a close and exciting game was expected. The Hartland girls won an easy victory.

From there the girls, displaying good sportsmanship and the will to win, went on to win all of their league games, and all but two of their non-league games.

The team wishes to express its appreciation to Mrs. Knight for her fine coaching and help.

We had a highly successful season with our opponents scoring 337 points while we scored 469.

The four highest scorers:

Faye Cool.....	250
Mary Ellen Stilson....	140

WINTER SPORTS

The Winter Sports team has a larger number of members out this year than it has had for a number of year, consisting mostly of Freshmen, Sophomores, two Juniors and two Seniors.

The first meet of the season was at Newport, where Hartland was successful with a score of 33-22. The second was at Bingham, the third here at Hartland, and the fourth at Monson. With the exception of the meet at Newport it was pretty much the same schools who were competing against each other, and it is interesting to note that the final winner was not decided in the last three meets until the last event was held.

Under the direction of Miss Moore a Carnival Ball was organized. The student body selected as King and Queen Joanne Jamieson and Webster Baird. Other candidates for this honor were Jackie Vining, Dolores Stedman, Virginia Salisbury, Gaston Boulanger, Lloyd Cookson and Olin Salisbury.

Immediately following the crowning of the King and Queen ribbons were presented to all the winning contestants. Joanne Jamieson and Webster Baird, with the assistance of the Council President, Richard Nichols, made the necessary presentations.

Looking back over the season, it is very obvious that while Hartland was superior in the snowshoe events, they were very deficient in skiing. Let's hope that another year will bring bigger hills and better skiers.

Franklin Morrison '51

BOYS' BASKETBALL

The basketball team of Hartland Academy, not enjoying such a triumphant year, finished with four victories and six losses, and a third place standing in the league. Most every player on the academy club saw action in at least one game, Lloyd Cookson and Vaughn Stedman playing in the all-star game at Corinna. Hard luck was a factor when losing to Corinna 43-49, and to Hermon 46-47, at Hartland. The Hartland Academy quintet, coached by Raymond Knight, consisted of the following players: Philip Gardner, Vaughn Stedman, Albert Stromback, Lloyd Cookson, Thirnwood Morgan, Kenneth Southard, Raymond Martin, James Jamieson, Ivan Estes, Blayn Tibbetts, Lloyd Hubbard, Robert Lucas, Donald Deering, Philip Emery, and Wayne Libby.

CHEERLEADING

A cheerleading squad was organized again this year with Mrs. Knight in charge. We were coached by Vivian Morgan, who spent a great deal of her time with us.

We learned new cheers, such as "Bezeek," and everybody had fun giving out with them.

The girls receiving letters this year are Sally Lucas, Jackie Vining, Dolores Stedman, Patty Scribner, Vivian Morgan, and Shirley Merrill. Credit should be given to Barbara Whitten, Marjorie Hart and Priscilla Estes for their fine sportsmanship. The number of practices you attend and the number of games you cheer in determine whether you receive a letter or not.

CROSS COUNTRY

With only one of last year's State championship team leaving due to graduation, we enjoyed a fairly successful season. When the regular season ended we had a record of three wins and three losses. At the State Meet in Orono we placed second behind M. C. I.

Coach Ray Knight is looking forward to a prosperous future due to the fact that a lot of young promising athletes are rapidly advancing.

TRACK

At Hartland Academy last year we had a fairly good season in track. Our track field isn't finished yet, so we had to have all of our meets away from home. We hope to have our field finished by the end of our school year. We had ten boys on our team and they all did their share to make our team successful. Our coach was Mr. Knight, who worked beside us and gave us the courage to go ahead. Our meets were as follows:

Two meets at M. C. I., with other schools competing. One meet with Dover-Foxcroft at Dover. The last meet of the season was with Colby College. There are three divisions in the track line in the State Meet—large, medium and small. We entered in the small division, as we have a small school. Eight schools participated in this division and we came out third in the meet. We would like to thank M. C. I. for letting us practice on their track. It helped us out a great deal.

Jokes

A. Haskell: "Where did the midget football teams play their New Year's game?"

D. Hardwick: "In the finger bowl."

J. Vining: "Why do you wear your stockings inside out?"

C. Webber: "My feet are so hot I just turned the hose on them."

Mr. Knight: "Two demerits, Bobby."

Bob Hughes: "How come?"

Mr. Knight: "Don't you know what time class starts?"

Bob Hughes: "Sure, it starts when I arrive."

P. Gardner: "No woman ever made a fool out of me."

M. Rowe: "Did you do it all yourself?"

Dr. Dummer: "You know what happens to boys who don't ask questions?"

Edwin Littlefield: "Yes; they grow up to be bachelors."

V. Stedman: "It doesn't take much to turn a woman's head."

T. Stromback: "You're right. That one just turned and looked at you."

Miss Brackley: "Name a collective."

C. McGowan: "Wastebasket."

Mr. Dummer: "Why were you late for school?"

M. Stilson: "I saw a sign and had to walk slow."

Mr. Dummer: "What did the sign say?"

M. Stilson: "Slow, School Ahead."

P. Emery: "What would you say if I threw you a kiss?"

D. Steadman: "I'd say you were the craziest boy I ever met."

Mr. Hacker: "Walter, why is a large pullet usually a better layer than a small one?"

W. Green: "Because she has had more experience."

Miss Brackley: "See here, Lloyd, you mustn't say 'I ain't going!' You must say, 'I am not going, he is not going, they are not going, and we are not going'."

L. Cookson: "Geel! Ain't nobody going?"

Waiter: "May I help you from the soup, sir?"

C. Furbush: "What do you mean, help me from the soup?"

Waiter: "Well, sir, judging from the sound I thought you might wish to be dragged ashore."

An eagle-eyed mortician noticed an old crone shuffling away from a funeral service at his parlor, and asked her how old she was.

"One hundred and one," cackled the old lady proudly.

"Well, well," said the mortician suavely. "Hardly worth going home, is it?"

Mr. Knight: "What kind of a bird is it that doesn't go south?"

D. Hardwick: "Jailbird."

Mr. Dummer: "Now, Thirnwood, can you give the class an example of wasted energy?"

T. Morgan: "Yes, telling a hair-raising story to a bald-headed man."

Mr. Morgan: "Thirnwood, you are going to have to wait until you have finished school before you can join the Navy."

T. Morgan: "Who wanted to join the Navy. I can run faster than I can swim."

D. Stedman (over the telephone): "Hello. It certainly is. Good-bye."

Mrs. Stedman: "Why were you so curt?"

D. Stedman: "I wasn't curt. When the voice said 'Long distance from Chicago,' I said, 'It certainly is.'"

S. Merrill: "In the summer time we eat out of doors."

D. Estes: "At my house we always eat out of plates."

M. Lawrence: "Do you like codfish balls?"

Franky Morrison: "I don't know — I never went to one."

Mrs. Baird: "Webster has been behaving terribly today. I wish you'd speak to him, father."

Mr. Baird (absent-mindedly looking up from his newspaper): "Hello, Webster."

B. Nichols: "Why do you want to raise mint when you get older?"

R. Chute: "Because Pop says that's where money comes from."

Miss Brackley: "What is the past tense of 'I drink'?"

C. Webber: "I am drunk."

Mrs. Knight: "Mary Ellen, are you taking all these notes down?"

M. E. Stilson: "All they give you in classes is notes."

Mrs. Knight: "Oh, Mary Ellen, you haven't that many notes."

M. E. Stilson: "Mrs. Knight, I've got so many notes that my notebook looks as if it were going to have a little notebook."

St. Peter: "How did you get to Heaven?"

Recent Arrival: "Flu."

G. Soule: "What did the skunk say when the wind changed?"

G. Boulanger: "It all comes back to me now."

Mr. Dummer to F. Morrison: "Why do you act so unhappy? Anything wrong?"

F. Morrison: "I had to shoot my dog this morning."

Mr. Dummer: "Was he mad?"

F. Morrison: "He wasn't exactly pleased about it."

C. Russell: "Why did you leave the girl's house so early?"

W. Baird: "While we were sitting on the sofa, she turned out the lights. Guess I can take a hint."

Mr. Knight: "Do you know how to make anti-freeze?"

R. Chute: "Sure, hide her pajamas."

Mr. Knight: "When anything goes wrong around our house I just get busy and fix it."

Mrs. Knight: "Yeah? Since you fixed the clock the cuckoo backs out and asks: 'What time is it?'"

Judge: "For beating that girl, I fine you $15.10."

F. Morrison: "What is the ten cents for?"

Judge: "Amusement tax."

L. Cookson: "Yeah, nice frame."

Personalized Portraits and it's all done with LIGHTS!

There's magic in lights . . . add a light here, place a spotlight there, and your portrait takes on the appearance of real form and individuality.

Your Vantine photographer knows how lighting effects can be best used . . . How easily they can reflect your personality.

Your Vantine photographer knows best how to secure the sharply etched photograph your engraver desires of the important senior year. . . The victories of the athletic teams . . . The brilliance of social occasions. . . . The Prom . . . The plays . . . The debates. . . . The expression of everyday life on the campus.

That personalized portraits by Vantine are important is attested to by the fact that over 300 schools and colleges repeatedly entrust their photographic work to Vantine.
