BABY SITTING

Baby sitting is a good job for a person whose nerves are good and hearing is poor, but my nerves are bad and my hearing is good. When someone calls up and asks "Would you take care of my little darlings for me tonight? There will be nothing for you to do. I will have the children in bed and they will be asleep. I will leave some ice cream and cake and give you two dollars," I always say, "Yes." It seems wonderful that I can earn two dollars just sitting and eating ice cream and reading magazines. So Saturday night I go to work as happy as can be. The little darlings mother shows me in and tells me to make myself at home. After I have the house memorized from end to end I smell men's talcum powder and Evening in Paris. After the smell, comes the mother and father. Before she goes she takes me upstairs to show me where her little darlings are sleeping. First she takes me to a little bed room which looks only big enough for four but I find six. I tell her that they are very sweet and start to go downstairs but she tells me she has some more. I cross my fingers while hoping there aren't going to be four more in each room and to my relief there are only three. But when she tells me the rest of them are downstairs I have to sit down on the bed and regain my strength. She pats my shoulder knowingly and helps me to get up. After they go I creep downstairs hoping I won't wake the little darlings. I sit down slowly, pick up a magazine (not noticing the name) and start reading. After I have read "Hot Lips," and "Too Young to Marry," I decide that it isn't the history book I thought it was. Oh well, I've started it, I might as well finish it. So I start another story. Then something strange happens. In the story the man is going to put his arm around the woman. When he does that she screeches. Why in the dickens does she screech? Oh heavens, that isn't she screeching, it's one of the fifteen babies. After I go to every room in the house it has to be the last one. I take the little darling downstairs and fix his bottle. After squirting the milk all over the baby and myself I decide it is warm enough. As I start upstairs with the baby under one arm and the bottle of milk in my hand, the telephone rings. I answer in one end of the receiver with the baby howling in the other end. After I lay the baby on the floor and give him his milk I try again. Oh dear, its a gravestone seller. Of all people to call at this time. He asks me if I would like to order a gravestone and I tell him to wait until tomorrow and my mother will order one for me. I don't know what he swallows but it sounds like his tongue. After a hour of wrestling I get them asleep again. I tiptoe to the refrigerator and got some ice cream. As I put the spoon to my mouth I hear a horrid sound. It sounds like a formation of jets but I discover it to be the whole fifteen little darlings crying. I go upstairs with a handful of tissues and as I come to the first open mouth I start to chuck the tissues into his mouth but decide that isn't the thing to do so I wipe his nose instead. Finally all is quiet and I go downstairs again. By this time my ice cream is melted so I don't get any of that. Oh well, I need something stronger than that anyway. I open the door of the refrigerator hoping to find a good strong drink. I find just what I need, a big bottle of cold orange ade. After the whole bottle of drink is gone I stagger to the couch, weary from a hard night's job. Just as I lay my head on the pillow the door opens and in comes the "little darlings," mama and daddy. And do you know what she says? "Not a sound from my little darlings. I just knew they would be good." But really baby sitting isn't always this bad. Sometimes there are only ten to take care of.

MY TOWN

If you would like a rest or change of land,
Just come to the town they call Hartland.
It is just this side of the tannery stream,
Where you can sit and fish and dream.

But if you want a real vacation,
Just take a train from the station.
Or if you prefer, you can drive your car,
For the distance isn't very far.
And when you arrive in the famous town,

Put on your specs and take a look around.

At every turn there's a filling station,
With gas and oil of the best creation.

Stop at the place they call McCormack's Cafe,

For they serve the public night or day.

Or if amusement you wish to seek,
The Avon theatre has movies twice a week.

There's a bowling alley and television to see,

And enjoyment you'll find — just take it from me.

And if you're looking for a school degree,

There's no better than Hartland Academy.

There are two churches standing in view,

And both extend a welcome to you.
If for a hike you would thrill,

Just climb to the peak of St. Albans Hill.

Better take a lunch and a drinking cup,

To refresh yourself as you're climbing up.

For when you have reached the very top,

You will be quite tired and willing to stop.

Now you can stop and a rest you can take.

Then gaze down on Great Moose Lake.

You're all welcome, so don't frown,
Come and visit our industrious town.

LITTLE MATTERS THAT MATTER MUCH

The code of good manners is not an arbitrary list of rules. It is the slow outgrowth of what has been found best during the many centuries that men have been learning to live in amity together. While the fundamental rule of kindness never changes, there is a constant modification of customs to fit the changing conditions of life.

Manners are general modes of life or conduct and may be either good or bad as based on inner standards of good will. Manners of the heart, however, may be present in the meanest and absent in the most palatial villa, or vice-versa for the poorest are not always the worthiest, nor the richest the most contemptible.

Good manners are the outward expression of a desire not to offend nor to make others uncomfortable, but to put others at ease and to make them happy; and if we base our behavior on this desire, we ourselves are much happier and all life may push ahead at first, but you will find that the person of better manners is, in the last analysis, the one who attains the better position, both in the social world and in the business world.

On the whole, we may look upon a knowledge of the principal rules of etiquette as we look upon traffic rules — a means of guiding us safely and courteously among our fellow-men. And so, we may sum this all up on this old adage, "Politeness is to do and say; The kindest thing in the kindest way."

Nancy Estes, '56

ENTHUSIASM

The New England town meeting is the only form of pure democracy which has survived the increased speed of our modern world. However, after witnessing the annual meeting of the town of Hartland, I began to wonder just how pure and effective this system is.

Upon entering the hall the first thing, greeting the eye, is a large number of empty seats. Where is the taxpayer who has spent the year complaining of a high tax rate? Where is the fault finding citizen? The entire effectiveness of the meeting is made almost nil by their unexcusable absence.

Several important and interested citizens are forced by the attending people to monopolize the debates. Under ten per cent of the "eligible legislators" actively participate in any discussion, whatsoever. Who is responsible for this? The remaining ninety per cent. Mr. Average Citizen denies himself his given right of free speech for no apparent reason. There are many people who can't even muster up enough strength to raise their hand to vote.

As the town meeting progresses another undesirable situation is observed with amazing facility. This is the lack of enthusiasm which is exemplified by the crude manner in which the meeting has been prepared. Question after question was showered upon the various responsible officials of the town. The most popular reply to these important questions was, "I don't believe I recollect. This matter should have been looked into before the meeting." The only explicable reason which can possibly be given as an excuse for these unsatisfactory answers is lack of an important element, enthusiasm.

However this situation is far from being dire or hopeless and many steps could be taken to promote personal interest. The first important step to be taken is the adopting of a correct and strict parliamentary procedure; thus eliminating much unnecessary chaos. This in turn would lead to a faster, more interesting meeting. Next the people themselves have a high barrier which they must hurdle unassisted. This is the ever-present obstruction, the lack of self-confidence. At the typical town meeting it is not hard to have important opinions wasted because someone didn't have the courage to make himself heard and understood.

By now you have probably deduced that I believe that the town meeting to be all wrong. This is quite contrary to my actual belief. For although I think that it would be possible to make many changes for the better, I also assert that there is no substitute for the pleasure which emerges from the feeling of self-government.

The members of the club are: Roberta Brown, Marleen Hart, Carmeline Monroe, Kathleen Marson, Alden Stuart, Eldora Dow and Nellie Crocker.

The students working in the office get an idea of what an office job is like. The people in there the first and fifth periods type up the absence lists and deliver them to each room. The other duties which they perform are: answering the telephone, supply the pupils' wants as nearly as possible, typing, and running off papers from the mimeograph machine, for the school paper or for a teacher. It is especially interesting and beneficial after those who are taking the commercial course as it helps them to prepare for a clerical career.

LIBRARY CLUB

This was the sixth year that the Library Club has been in operation. The advisor this year, as last, was Mr. Boterf.

The members were: President, Philip Deering; Vice President, Alden Stuart; Secretary and Treasurer, Virginia Winchester; and the following members:

Donna Dionne	Eugene Webber
Eugene Morrison	Roxene Hughes
Marjorie Raymond	Tressa Bubar

This year as every year, there is a librarian at the study hall table, whose duties are to keep the library books in order and to supply the necessary books and magazines to the students.

This year the club has tried to keep the books in order and to run the library successfully.

We sincerely appreciate the co-operation we had from the student body to make this club a success. We hope to see more members in the club next year.

FRENCH CLUB

At the beginning of the school year, we organized a French Club with ten members and Mrs. White as faculty director. The following officers were elected:

President	Joan Griffith
Secretary	Marie Patterson
Treasurer	Douglas Emery

At the first meeting we decided to send a Care package of staple foods to France for Christmas. We held fudge and pie sales to raise the money.

At Christmas time we held a Christmas party at the Home Economics Building. We exchanged gifts and a good time was had by all.

Next, we decided to hold a Tag-Day for the benefit of the polio fund. It was very successful and we thank everyone for contributing so generously.

On March 2, we went to Newport to see April in Paris. It showed many beautiful scenes of Paris. Plans are being made for a Spring Guest Night Banquet.

ASSEMBLY CLUB

The Assembly Club was formed this year, in October, by Miss Kane. There were fifteen ambitious people who wanted to make it possible to have more assemblies. We voted to have one for Halloween. The name of it was "Safety on Halloween." Everybody seemed to like it so we decided to have them more often.

At the next meeting there were many new members, and we elected as our President, Alden Stuart, and Rose Brooker as the Secretary-Treasurer. We have had a number of assemblies this year, and we certainly hope that we can continue the Assembly Club next year.

The Future Homemakers of America started this year with forty-one members.

One big event of the year was held when the officers were installed with a candlelight ceremony. It was very pretty. We had a guest speaker, Miss Janice Cogswell, the Somerset County Home Demonstration Agent. She gave us wonderful hints on wrapping Christmas gifts and boxes going overseas. Many of the girls' parents attended. Officers installed were:

The F.F.A. at Hartland started the year off with a "bang", by winning the State Championship Farmers' Fair Judging Contest. Those who took part in this contest were Eugene Webber, Linwood Soule, and Keith Bubar.

Our Chapter's group project was raising peas and corn. Due to the drought, we made only $115. We figured that was pretty good in view of the fact that other farmers came out in the red. During the year Christmas cards and all occasion cards have been sold. We cleared $75 profit. Seeds are now being sold and we hope to clear $50. on them. Another group project of raising beans and corn is being planned.

During the year, three boys won a banquet Dinner in the Reddy Kilowatt Essay Contest. They are Eugene Webber, Donald Neal, and Wayne Weeks.

Dr. P. R. Briggs has offered a purebred Guernsey heifer calf to the outstanding boy in Vocational Agriculture. We wish to thank him for

After the season was over Mr. and Mrs. White gave the boys a spaghetti supper which the boys appreciated very much. At the supper the team elected a new captain who is Elmer Ballard. Douglas Emery was elected A. A. representative.

The annual foul shooting contest was held at Colby, and Paul McNichol was the contestant from Hartland. He made 32 out of 50 in competition.

High scorer for the year was Philip Deering, the captain of the team. He scored 155 points. The next two highest scorers were Richard Martin with 137 points and Clark Connelly with 113 points.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The girls basketball team started in October with fourteen girls eager to go. Ida Mae Buker and Ethelyn Wheeler were the only girls which the team lost because of graduation.

The girls did not win the Championship but they worked hard and had lots of fun. They played 12 games, lost 5, and won seven.

Roberta Brawn and Vera Weir are the only girls the team will lose next year.

Next years team looks good with many promising players coming up.

The squad consisted of the following:

Vera Weir, Roberta Brawn, Marleen Hart (captain), Romona Wheeler, Meredith Post, Carolyn Brawn, Frances Goforth, Vondell Estes, Eleanor

Littlefield, Sandra Southards, Nancy Estes, Donna Goforth, Priscilla Deering, Florence Southards.

CROSS COUNTRY

The 1952 Cross-Country team improved greatly over last year's team. We not only won several meets but Mer'on Emery who had never run before, captured first place in the Central Maine League Meet at Carmel where Hartland competed against Carmel Corinna, and East Corinth.

Although we can't say that we had a winning team, we can say that everyone displayed good sportsmanship both in winning and losing and everyone had a wonderful time.

We know that next year will bring forth a much better team under Coach White's fine guidance and inspiration.

WINTER SPORTS

Old Man Winter has been rather mean to Hartland Academy's Winter Sports team this year. Since we have never had enough snow at any one time to practice on, competing in carnivals has been rather difficult.

In spite of this handicap, the team competed in a carnival at Bingham and one at Monson. Winning was not the main objective in going to these carnivals. It was hoped that these teams would have a chance to compete in a carnival at Hartland. No trophies were won by the Hartland team, but I am sure that everybody had a good time.

Despite the fact that Hartland Academy was unable to hold the carnival events, the annual Winter Carnival Ball was held in the Academy Gym on February 21.

Ramona Wheeler was crowned Queen and Roland Webber was crowned King of this annual event. Other candidates included Linwood Soule, Jackie Cool, Stephen McNichol, Vondell Estes, James Morgan, and Sandra Southard.

Meredith Post was our manager and Jean Dow, assistant manager.

BASEBALL

The baseball team of '52 posted the best record of any baseball team in the history of Hartland Academy. The team was undefeated in eighteen straight games, playing some of the best M teams in Maine.

The academy nine had little trouble with any pitching in the class M playoffs, for in no game did Hartland score less than seven runs.

Hartland had a great pitching staff last spring. It had to its credit two no-hit games, one one hit-no run game, and seven shutouts.

It was quite a thrill for all of us when Hartland Academy left the field at Colby with the Class M State Championship.

We all want to thank Norman White, our coach, for the splendid job he did. Mr. White has been working with our ball team for the last two years and this year his coaching certainly paid off.

All the members of the team want to thank the townspeople for the trip to Boston and the jackets, the Lions and Firemen for the banquet and baseballs, and Mr. Kirstein for the banquet at the Kirnwood Club.

CHEERLEADING

The cheerleading squad of '52-'53 consisted of two groups of five. One group of girls who were from St. Albans and the other group which was from Hartland. Each team took turns cheering. The St. Albans team started the year at the Round Robin and both teams cheered in the Tournament at Newport, which ended the basketball season.

To start the year off, new uniforms of black corduroy were made by the Home Economics girls. The Cheerleaders were also going to have new blouses, but due to some mix-up, they did not arrive, so they wore the nylon blouses that were used last year. To add to the appearance of the uniforms, black belts and white sneakers were worn.

Both teams added new cheers and new motions to some of the old cheers.

JOKES

Nancy: "My father takes things apart to see why they don't go."

Clark: "So what?"

Nancy: "You'd better go."

Mechanic: "My advice is to keep that jalopy of yours moving."

Jim: "Why?"

Mechanic: "If you ever stop, the police will think it's an accident."

Mrs. Knowles: "My little son Otto, is studying birdca'ls. Every morning he goes out on our balcony to give birdcalls."

Mr. Gee: "And is he so good that the birds answer him?"

Mrs. Knowles: "That I don't know, but twice your old black cat has chased him up the TV aerial."

Bobby: (Hiking to Dover) "Can I catch the 6:45 train if I cut through this field of yours?"

Farmer: "If my bull sees you, you might catch the 6:15."

Grandmother: "Well, darling, did you see Santa Claus last night?"

Junior: "No, I didn't really see him, but I heard what he said when he stumbled over my tricycle."

Barber: "Was your tie red when you came in?"

Customer: "No."

Barber: "Gosh!"

Izzy: (to girl from Dexter) "You have such beautiful red hair. Why do you dye the roots black?"

Eugene M: "I would like to dance like this forever."

Gail: "Don't you ever want to improve?"

Mr. Dummer: (in Physics class) "Can anyone name two shooting stars?"

Earl S: "Gene Autry and Roy Rogers."

Betty: "I'm glad I wasn't born in France."

Neal: "Why?"

Betty: "I can't speak French."

Mess Sergeant: "I don't know why you guys are complaining about the bread. The soldiers at Valley Forge would have loved to have had it."

Private: "They sure would. It was fresh then."

Visitor: "Are you sure the boss isn't in?"

Office Boy: "Do you doubt his word, sir?"

Amos: "Why do they use knots instead of miles on the ocean?"

Whitey: "Because they have to keep the ocean tide!"

Doug T: "Why is the orchestra leader shaking a stick at the lady?"

Merlon: "He's not shaking a stick at her."

Doug: "Then what's she screaming for?"

Freshman: "Have you lived here all your life?"

Senior: "Not yet."

Basil: "I was tracking a bear this morning, but I lost him."

Ray: "Why didn't you keep on his tracks?"

Basil: "The tracks got too fresh."

"Drop in some night," Said one Eskimo to another, "and we'll chew the fat together."

Lady to new Maid: "Be careful of this table. It goes back to Louis the XIV."

Maid: "Huh! That's nothing. My whole living room suite goes back to Sears the 15."

Soldier: "Sir, the enemy are before us thick as peas."

General: "All right, shell them!"

Mrs. Dummer to Mr. Dummer: "I scratched the front fender a little, dear. If you want to look at it, it's in the back seat."

An Actor believes that a small role is better than a long loaf.

Tramp: "I haven't tasted food for a week."

Man: "It still tastes the same."

Salesman: "You have lived here in this out-of-the-way place for forty years?"

Native: "I can't either. That's why I live here."

Doug H: "This match won't light."

Keith G: "What's the matter with it?"

Doug: "I don't know. It lit all right a minute ago."
