Bedroom of Birney Moore

You are now standing in the closet of Birney Moore's bedroom, viewing his room as it appeared on the day of his high school graduation from Hartland Academy. Birney was a typical Maine teenage boy. He played baseball, worked hard in school, and was popular among his friends. His bedroom was a place where he could pursue his hobbies and find some privacy.

Remembering his home, Birney later said, "I was anxious to leave for the big world, but I never thought I wouldn't be back." After college, he came back only for visits. But Birney's parents continued to keep his bedroom almost the same as he had left it after high school.
